

Learning Technologies and Your Privacy

The International College of Manitoba (ICM) may record online lectures as part of the remote delivery of your course. Lectures are delivered and may be recorded through video conference tools we use from time to time (e.g. Zoom, Microsoft Teams, etc.).

We record these sessions to make them available to other students that may have not been able to attend the session when it was live, as well as to make them available to students who have attended the session so that they may revisit the session at a later date. Recorded sessions may also be used by ICM to ensure the ongoing quality of our course delivery, and to help to further educate our teaching staff. Where a class is being recorded, a recording icon will be visible within the video conferencing platform.

Recording of online classes will capture any information that you provide such as video and/or audio recordings of your voice and information you post on the chat feature. As such, it is advisable to avoid disclosing any personal identifying information to a third party. If you do not wish to be recorded, you may disable your camera and microphone in the Zoom application.

Similarly, other remote learning tools may be used as part of the curriculum delivery for your courses (e.g. include, but not limited to Padlet, Mentimeter or Kahoot, etc.). As such it is advisable to avoid disclosing any personally identifiable information to these third parties. If you have any questions or concerns with any technology used to support the learning experience, it is advised that you contact your course instructor directly to discuss your concerns.

Further details about how we collect, use and disclose your personal information can be found in our Privacy Policy.

If you have any questions or concerns about the use of video conferencing tools or the collection, use or disclosure of your personal information, please contact the ICM Student Success team at advisor@learning.icmanitoba.ca.
